Romance Helps War Factories

Survey Shows Many Wedded Teams Are Toiling at Same Bench.

WASHINGTON.—Romance, as well as victory, is blossoming on the nation's assembly lines, says Universal Service.

In war industries, from coast to coast, married couples are working side by side at essential jobs. So are many engaged couples. And, contrary to the general notion that people in love can't keep their minds on their work, personnel managers report that these "romance teams" generally set an extra-high record of job efficiency.

Why? Several reasons are advanced by the experts, but the chief factor is believed to be that joint employment of married couples often makes for a more normal type of home life, and thus permits better concentration.

Absenteeism, according to reports made available to the War Manpower commission, is almost unknown among these "romance teams."

Keep Same Hours.
Having the same hours, husband and wife can share the same amusements and the same friends—something that is often impossible when either member of the family is a night worker.

Many of the "romance teams" are no longer young.
Mr. and Mrs. William R. Shaw of Pittsburgh might be called "the perfect working couple." They form a riveting team in the Glenwood shops of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

When they rivet the seams of a locomotive boiler, Mrs. Shaw, 43, stands inside with a bucking bar to hold the red hot rivets, while on the outside her husband, 50, operates the pneumatic riveting hammer.

At the Rock-Ola corporation factory in Chicago, engaged on war contracts, William T. Moore and his wife, Mary, work on the same floor. They met and married in Ireland during World War I, when he was in the United States navy. After the war they came to the United States. With them was their baby son, John Kenneth Moore. In a baby contest aboard their ship, the youngster took first honors as "the perfect baby." The "perfect baby" is now a lieutenant in the United States army.

His mother, as her added contribution to victory, operates a milling machine on an essential war job. His father is an inspector in the same plant.

Teamed Flances Job.
Frank Battista, assembly machine adjuster in the Winchester Repeating Arms company plant at New Haven, Conn., met his wife-to-be, Antoinette, when she got a job there several months ago. He taught her how to operate a machine for assembling cartridges for a semi-automatic carbine. It wasn't long before Frank and Antoinette were married.

The Battistas continue to work in the same department. Frank, expecting the army will call him soon, has been teaching Antoinette all he knows about adjusting machinery.

So if he is called he can step into his job and not only keep the home fires burning but the job wheels turning.

Similar couples are daily contributing their part to the war effort throughout the country.

A survey shows that, generally, they share the home tasks as well as their factory tasks.

Some take turns in getting meals. "It works out fine with us," says Mrs. Battista. "We really spent most of our honeymoon in the factory, and it's still a honeymoon, I'm glad to say."

"We do everything on a share-and-share-alike basis, like real partners. And it works out beautifully."

Solomons' Wives Are
Priced at $16.50 a Head
WOODWARD, OKLA.—The price of a bride in the Solomons is $16.50 a head, Maj. Emmet N. Carter has written.

Color of the brides is saddle brown. There are strings attached to the purchase of one, such as:

1. The soldier must promise to marry her before he flirts with her.
2. He must get the consent of parents and the village chief.
3. He must promise not to take her home with him, across the seas.

$200,000 Carpet Missing
From Athens Storehouse
ATHENS.—One of the world's most valuable carpets, that made in the 16th century and given to the Dalia Laura of Tibet by the Chinese emperor in 1661 and now valued at $200,000, has disappeared from the storehouse of a Greek import firm in Athens.

Cow Hops Moonshine but
Moon Was Too Far Away
MARION, N. C.—Bossy was a contented cow in a dairy barn with not even the slightest urge to jump over the moon.

But she went down a path with a liquor still at the end of it. Bossy drank so much that she tried to jump over everything in sight and her sight was terrific.

But the moon was too far away. So she just lay down and died with a sheriff as a witness.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Rogers and family and Mrs. Daisy Rogers went to Lynchburg Saturday.

Miss Emma C. Thorne Garrett is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Garrett.

While she was teaching in Nanjing, China, this American woman was gathering material for her many short stories and novels. She won the Pulitzer prize for literature in 1931 for one of her books.

She was born in Hillsdale, N. Y. In 1914 she received a bachelor of arts degree from Randolph-Macon Women's college, and in 1920 she obtained a master's degree from the University of West Virginia.

She has conferred honorary doctor of letters degrees upon her.

Her married name is Mrs. Richard J. Walsh, but she is known to the world by another name. She has two children and has adopted four others.

Literary and scholarly societies have honored her repeatedly. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the American Academy of Arts and Letters. She holds the William Dean Howells medal and the Nobel award in literature.

As an authority on China, and particularly on the Chinese, she is now employed her abilities to increase harmonious understanding between the Chinese and ourselves.

MARK TWAIN
DIDN'T SAY
"EVERYONE COMPLAINS ABOUT THE WEATHER, ETC."

Whenever the weather gets a little out of hand, we hear someone remark, "Well, Mark Twain said 'Everyone complains about the weather but nobody does anything about it.'"

Like most other quotations credited to famous men, this one belongs to someone else—this time to Mark Twain's good friend Charles Dudley Warner, who wrote this saying in the Hartford Courant in 1890. It is not known how the saying came to be attributed to Twain, for he is not known to have ever quoted the saying to any one.
